We have a thing called Rules of Evidence, Chucky. Your complaint doesn't exist until a flesh and blood Susana materializes. Since we both know you are Susana and, while re-assignment surgery might be your best option at this point, you sure don't look like a Susana. But, whatever floats your boat, if you can even get on a boat just like Kev.

However, if the request for investigation comes, we'll have what we need to subpoena your ISP and verify what we already know. And, I'll still be able to do all the things you can't and do them without having to wear a diaper. We all have First Amendment rights, Chuckie. You can parody me and I can parody you. I ain't afraid of anyone, but surely not you. You know why? Because I have stood up to bullies my whole life and I've learned that they all wind up the same way in the end. Chuckie, you have already gotten yours. All that you do now isn't going to change that. With or without my license, with or without a job, with or without a single client, I will still be standing over you when the dust settles.

We'll see, Kev. If it happens, it will be the first time someone got suspended on a complaint from someone who doesn't exist. You'll be going under oath either way after your ISP answers my subpoena. I'll gladly take the six-month rip and get the big write up in the bar journal. I need a vacation and I'll be a hero to people—all able to run without a diaper slowing them down—who really matter.
